

GEN-Z CLOTHING CATEGORY & PRODUCT TAXONOMY

Market Research & Catalogue Architecture Report

Prepared for: Cultraven

September 26, 2026

Executive Summary

This report consolidates current Gen-Z apparel market signals into a complete product taxonomy for Cultraven. The objective is to move the catalogue planning beyond broad parent categories such as "T-shirt, jeans, hoodie" and into the full set of silhouettes, sub-types, fits, finishes and aesthetic directions that define the Gen-Z apparel market today. The taxonomy below is organised so it can be used directly as the foundation for product database structuring, catalogue navigation, and collection planning.

The strongest recurring 2026 signals across global and Indian fashion sources point to oversized and relaxed silhouettes, baggy and wide-leg bottoms, cargo styling, graphic tees, Y2K and retro references, sporty/athleisure pieces, co-ords, varsity and utility layering, and gender-fluid silhouettes as the core directions shaping Gen-Z buying behaviour.

1. Market Context & Signals

A Gen-Z clothing brand should not limit its catalogue to a small set of parent categories. The actual market spans dozens of distinct silhouettes and sub-types across tops, bottoms, outerwear, sets, sleepwear and athleisure. Oversized tees and baggy denim in particular are established, structural pieces of current Gen-Z streetwear rather than a short-lived microtrend — current 2026 sources repeatedly identify relaxed silhouettes, graphic tees, cargos and wide-leg/baggy bottoms as core, recurring pieces rather than seasonal noise.

This has direct implications for Cultraven's catalogue, filters, inventory structure and website navigation: treating "upper body wear" as a single category is a common and costly mistake. It should instead be split into T-shirts, tops, shirts, polos, hoodies, sweatshirts, sweaters/knitwear, jackets, outerwear, blazers and vests — each with its own sub-types, as detailed in Section 2.

2. Master Product Taxonomy

The following 33 categories form the base taxonomy recommended for Cultraven's product catalogue. Each category is broken into its practical sub-groups, with every relevant product type, silhouette and construction variant listed for use in catalogue planning, filtering and SKU creation.

5. Recommended Product Database Architecture

Rather than one flat list of categories — which quickly becomes unmanageable — Cultraven's product database should follow a layered structure:

Department → Category → Product Type → Fit → Design → Fabric → Wash → Collection

Worked examples:

Department	Category	Product Type	Fit	Design	Fabric	Wash	Collection
Men	T-Shirts	Oversized Graphic T-Shirt	Drop Shoulder	Back Print	240 GSM Cotton	Vintage Wash	Streetwear
Unisex	Bottoms	Baggy Cargo Jeans	Wide Leg	Multi Pocket	Denim	Acid Wash	Y2K
Women	Tops	Baby Tee	Fitted	Graphic	Cotton	Garment Dyed	Y2K

This structure allows Cultraven to generate hundreds of distinct SKUs without inventing hundreds of meaningless top-level categories — new products are created by combining attributes rather than adding new menu items.

6. Priority Launch Categories

To avoid launching with an unfocused catalogue of 300+ products, initial catalogue architecture should concentrate on the following 15 categories, ranked by current market priority:

Priority	Category	Key variants
1	T-Shirts	Oversized, boxy, graphic, heavyweight, washed
2	Jeans	Baggy, wide-leg, relaxed, low/mid-rise, washed
3	Cargos	Baggy, parachute, utility, multi-pocket
4	Hoodies	Oversized, heavyweight, zip, graphic
5	Shirts	Oversized, relaxed, Cuban, flannel, utility
6	Sweatshirts	Oversized, graphic, heavyweight
7	Track / Parachute Pants	Wide, relaxed, nylon, Y2K
8	Shorts / Jorts	Baggy, Bermuda, cargo, denim
9	Jackets	Varsity, bomber, racing, denim, utility
10	Co-ords	Shirt sets, tee sets, hoodie sets, cargo sets
11	Tops	Baby tees, crop, tanks, fitted, mesh
12	Knitwear	Polo, sweater, cardigan, vest
13	Nightwear	Oversized sets, pajama sets, lounge sets

Priority	Category	Key variants
14	Athleisure	Track sets, performance, jerseys
15	Statement / Y2K	Flare, low-rise, metallic, rhinestone, distressed

7. Strategic Recommendation

One correction to a common early-stage framing: do not treat "upper body wear" as a single clothing category. For a serious apparel brand, this must be split into T-shirts, tops, shirts, polos, hoodies, sweatshirts, sweaters/knitwear, jackets, outerwear, blazers and vests. Collapsing these into one category is the most common structural mistake at the catalogue-planning stage, and it directly degrades site navigation, filtering, inventory management and SEO category structure later on.

8. Next Steps

Recommended next step: convert this taxonomy into a working 200–300+ item product-category spreadsheet, structured with columns for Category, Subcategory, Product Type, Gender, Fit, Trend/Aesthetic, Season, Fabric, GSM and SKU naming, and mapped to the proposed website collection structure — ready for direct use in Cultraven's inventory and catalogue build.
